

VISITING STUDENT STATUS

Non-Degree Seeking Student:

Students who do not presently wish to enroll in a degree program at REACH, but wish to take courses for credit may apply for a non-degree status. Students are expected to complete all readings and assignments. Preparation for each class is required. Assignments should be submitted by their due dates. Students should acquire all materials prior to the start of class in order to stay current with assignments. Course work taken as a non-degree seeking student may be applied towards a degree through Trinity upon acceptance to a bachelor's degree program. However, credit may not be applied towards degree programs at other institutions. No amount of course work will assure a student admission to a Trinity degree program. A non-degree seeking student may not miss more than one REACH session per course to be awarded credit.

Auditing Student:

Students who do not presently wish to enroll in a degree program, but wish to take courses for personal enrichment are allowed to audit classes. Auditing entitles a student to sit in class sessions and participate in discussions. Auditors are expected to do all readings and other assignments and to otherwise prepare for each class. Assignments should be submitted on their due dates. Faculty will provide feedback on prepared work, but will not assign grades. Auditors should acquire all instructional materials prior to the start of class in order to stay current with assignments. An auditing student may not miss more than one REACH class session per course to be awarded credit.
